Dressing Down for a Cause

By: Alaina Roberts, Mila Discenza, Emily Zamarripa

On Wednesday October 31, 2018 students will be allowed to dress down to help with the damage that Hurricane Michael created. This money will be going to Principal Dodd's church. They will send the money to the people who serve out food to the police, fireman, electrician, etc. Our school also wants you to donate some supplies such as cheap T-shirts, duct tape, flashlights, nails, water, gloves, non-perishable food items, moving boxes, etc. This will help the people who got hit by the hurricane because it gives them a start while the people are working on their house.

Fright Night at SCJH

By: Andrew Seese and Blaze Welsh

The dance was a great time for everyone that decided to come. Everyone had fun, even the kids who didn't dance had a great time. Students were allowed to go outside for a little and hangout. The costumes at the dance were amazing. Even DJ Tillis, Mr. Schmidt, and one of the volunteers had awesome costumes! The winners of the costume contest hosted at the dance were Michael Carlson with the the award of most creative costume, winning the award of the most cute costume was Skyler Hampton, and finally there was Michael Frank with the scariest costume. Everyone, including us two, can't wait for next year!

Mrs. Riga

By Francesca Russo, Katelynn Wood, and Zahra Qizilbash

Mrs. Riga, the sixth grade math teacher was chosen as teacher of the week for this weeks ENN newspaper. When asked how she felt about teaching 6th grade math, she replied with "I was really afraid that I wouldn't like it, but I actually really enjoy it." When asked which subject she enjoyed teaching the most, she answered with a tie between language arts and math. Lastly, the interviewers asked her if she preferred and certain grades over the other. She said that she does not have a favorite, as every grade has individual parts that she likes. The students at SCJH really like having her as a teacher, and hopes she enjoys teaching here.

Artist of the Week

By Francesca Russo, Katelynn Wood, and Zahra Qizilbash

Kaitlynn Nappo is the artist of the week! She submitted a drawing of a sugar skull that she created in art class. She was also interviewed by the student life ENN team. When asked how she felt about being chosen, she answered, "I think it's cool that I am artist of the week." They also asked her if she enjoyed drawing, why or why not? She answered that she likes to draw, but it is not one of her hobbies. One of her hobbies is running track. When ENN asked how she feels about having Mrs. Franek as a teacher, she said that she enjoys having Mrs. Franek as a teacher and thinks that her constructive criticism is helpful.

A Special Note To The Seventh Grade Student Body

Anonymous

Listen. Up. The seventh grade student body is out of control. We need to shape up. I don't understand how we do not get it. We've had dressdown privileges taken away before, we don't get recess after lunch anymore, and our eighth grade Washington D.C. field trip is on the verge of or already being taken away. Dr. Dodds and Mr. Devarney and most of our teachers have talked to us multiple times at lunch and in the classroom about being respectful and not acting like a crummy person. Because crummy people are what we're acting like. We are being disgusting people. Get that through your thick skulls. And while the principal and vice principal would never be this flat out with us, I will be. We need to understand that we. Are. Boorish. We're boorish to our teachers. And, unfortunately, we're boorish even to our peers. And, being a seventh grader myself, I can tell you firsthand that the drama is also outrageous. This drama is petty, and it spreads like wildfire. Like Dr. Dodds said, it's seventh grade that's in his office everyday. Not sixth, not eighth. Always seventh. Sometimes because of behavior, sometimes because of drama. We don't know what administration will take away next, so let's not risk it. We, as a group, need to become more self respecting and more respecting to others, and just be better people. So let's do it. And let's do it right. Right now.

1. Get a ketchup bottle.
2. Clean out the ketchup bottle.
3. Pour pancake mix in the ketchup bottle.
4. The pancake mix will squirt out faster and the pancake mix will not make a mess.
